SUPPORT LARRY THE CAT FOR UK PRIME MINISTER!

BY W.E. GLADSTONE

Liz Truss was elected as UK Prime minister in September. However, recent polls have shown who most British people REALLY want for PM, and it's not in fact Truss, or even Rishi Sunak or Boris Johnson again, but Larry, Chief Mouser to the Cabinet Office.

Posters have been put up all across the country, advertising Larry's campaign, with the slogan "Larry for Leader". He has gained support from more than 98% of British cats and received endorsements from some of the most popular newspapers in the world, such as The Saturday Evening Mews and The Daily Paws.

In a campaign interview on 29 August, Larry stated, "Choice is a wonderful thing.... the choice between chasing a feather or a string. But when it comes to the nation's next leader, why do the humans get to choose for the 34 million cats and dogs? That's why I'm throwing my collar in the ring, to give Britain a proper choice." If you want to support Larry and learn more about his campaign, you can visit Larry4Leader.com or contact The London Mousers & Company for questions.

BOMBAY CAT BRAVELY FIGHTS OFF BAT

BY BART G. BLACKSTONE

OLYMPIA, WASHINGTON, US – Me-Owly is a cat who is named for her owl-like eyes, which she put to great use on August 22, when a rabid brown bat found its way through a window in her humans' house in Washington state. When she spotted the animal, Me-Owly leaped into action without a second thought, bravely fighting with teeth and claws to protect her humans. After a short duel with the moggy, the bat fled the house in terror.

Me-Owly has been widely praised for her bravery and is regarded as a hero by many cats in her home town.

THE MOGGY WITH A PET MOUSE

BY LILY, GCOK CH. 192

GLOUCESTERSHIRE, UK – A British Shorthair cat named Misty is the resident chief mouser at a farm in England. Except, instead of eating the mice she catches, she brings them back inside the farmhouse and allows them to eat out of her food bowl. While some of the mice leave after finishing their meal, some have stayed at the farm and continued to eat Misty's cat food.

In an interview, she stated, "It seems like a fair compromise; the mice get to eat every day, but they don't get into the farm's food stores. Win, win!"

CAT CHASES OFF ROBBERS

BY N. GETHERS

BELDEN, MISSISSIPPI, US – Last month, Bandit, a tortoiseshell moggy from America, managed to chase off some actual bandits who were attempting to break into her human's home in Mississippi.

It was barely past 12 in the morning on 24 August, when Bandit was scouring the house in her usual midnight patrol. That's when she noticed two robbers at the front door, using a crowbar to try to get the door open.

Rather than alert her human to the robbers, Bandit decided to take the matter into her own paws. When they finally got the door open, Bandit attacked the criminals, claws unsheathed and teeth bared. After the fight, the bandits fled in terror, leaving the triumphant cat Bandit to enjoy her victory.

DETROIT MOGGY NAMED TALLEST LIVING CAT

BY W.E. GLADSTONE

DETROIT, MICHIGAN – Barivel Tinnirelo of Italy has held the Guinness World record for the tallest living cat, at 1 foot, 4 inches, since 2018. but another cat, Fenrir Antares Powers, a 2-year-old savannah cat out of Detroit, Michigan, recently broke the record, with a recorded height of 1 foot, 6.83 inches.

Fenrir's brother, Altair Cygnus Powers, also holds the record for the longest tail ever.

CAT BRAVELY ATTACKS FROSTCAT DISGUISED

AS STATUE

BY REAULLE LA CHARTREUX

Note: this article was originally written in french. It has been translated as best we can, but errors may occur.

PARIS, FRANCE – A moggy by the name of Cénéodore (who is also chaircat of France's GCOK), spotted a statue of another cat outside his Paris home on Friday. Except he could tell there was something odd about the statue, because every once in a while a gust of wind seemed to ruffle its fur.

Cénéodore asked his human to open the front door, and the brave moggy came out to investigate. As soon as Cénéodore smelled the apparent statue, he realized it was not one, but rather frostcat in disguise. He immediately attacked the impostor, fighting bravely until the frostcat turned and fled. And while his human believed that Cénéodore had simply gone crazy and attacked a defenseless statue, he may have actually saved Paris from a frostcat invasion.

LARRY CHASES OFF ANOTHER FOX

BY H.J. PALMERSTON

Downing St, LONDON – Two months ago, Larry, Chief Mouser to the Cabinet office, chased off an intruding fox from the gardens of No. 10, an incident that was reported in last month's edition of The Mouser Post.

However, Larry seems to have a knack for chasing off foxes, as he saw off ANOTHER one Tuesday evening.

The fox appeared on Downing Street at around 9 PM, sneaking through the gates. Larry kept his eyes trained on the late-night intruder as he approached the fox and backed it into some brush off Downing Street, according to The Mouser Post. As the fox began to disappear into the bushes, Larry struck, leaping at the larger animal in a quick scuffle that sent the fox scurrying down the road.

But when the fox scampered back in Larry's direction, it was less confident. All it took was a stern look from Larry as he took a seat on the pavement to send his foe fleeing back into the night.

So even though Larry is officially a mouser, he possesses a large variety of other talents, including fox fighting.

UPDATES ON THE GCOK UNDERGROUND RAILROAD

BY ABBY, GCOK CH. 192

The GCOK has recruited more armadillos to help dig the underground railway. Bart estimates it to be completed by late September of 2023.
